Advices from East Tennessee state that many of the Union men there are supporting Col. What will not partisans resort to ture of paper, and are as valuable as any of for the purpose of deceiving the people?

Gen. Samuel R. Anderson.

This gentleman, who is a Brigadier in the Southern Army, has been assigned to the command of the Confederate torces in East Tennessee, and has spent two days in our city. His head-quarters, for a time, are to be at Johnson's Depot, in Washington coun-ty, and he has gone on to that point, where he is concentrating a large number of troops From that point they will go to Virginia, turning to the left of Wytheville and New-bern. The chief of Gen. Anderson's staff, is Jo. Pickett, who also holds the commission of Colonel from the Confederate authorities. We have known Gen. Anderson love, we have never known him to be other than a clever man, a good man, and an opright man.
Col. Pickett is a whole-souled fellow—was always the friend of East Tennessee, and while in the Legislature, voted for East Tennessee interests, under all circumstances. These gentlemen have assured us that they are not here to intimidate East Tennesceans, or to oppress or harass them. Nay, we venture to say, that before either of them would draw their swords upon East Tennesseans, they would resign their positions in the army, brave as they are known to be. Nor will they encourage any disturbance in our end of the State, or tolerate bad conduct on the part of troops under their command.—Knox-wille Whig, July 23.

OF WASHINGTON.

FOR CONGRESS-THIRD DISTRICT: GEORGE W. BRIDGES

[Norg.-Mesers. Natson, Maynage, and Buildes ar andidates for the Lincoln Congress at Washington.] Mr. BROWNLOW when he run up the above ticket said : Polk is an original Union man and a Douglas Democrat; and although HE YIELDED TO THE SECESSION PRESSURE, as every body did in Middle and West Tennessee, HE WAS AMONG THE LAST MEN TO SUR-RENDER, AND CONTINUED TO MAKE UNION SPEECHES UNTIL HIS FRIENDS REMONSTRATED, BECAUSE OF THE DANGER HE WAS EXPOSED TO.

In a subsequent number of his paper, Mr

Gov. Harris, listening to the false repreentations of malicious men in East Tennessee, in sending troops from Middle Tennessee here to subjugate Union men. This means of bringing on ewil war, and exasperating the Union men of East Tennessee, COL. POLK IS OPPOS-ED TO. AND WOULD NOT LEND HIM-SELF TO ANY SUCH PURPOSES. It is, therefore, the duty and interest of every Union man in East Tennessee to vote for Polk. The troops sent to East Tennessee are to protect the lives and property of our citizens there from the merciless and barbarous warfare of Lincoln's soldiery. It seems that Col. Polk "is opposed to and would not lend himself to any such purpose." Why not-the purpose is most patriotic and humane?

The Columbia Herald, printed in the town that Col. Polk resides in, says : But were Major Polk possessed of all of the qualifications which he lacks, and none of the negligent habits that he has, his equivocal position upon the Southern Rights questions render him an extremely unsafe man to put at the head of affairs in the present crists. He voted a folded ticket at the recent election, and has no speech on record before or since identifying him with the cause of the South. On the contrary, in one of his last speeches at this place, previous to his canthat he was stopped by his audience. This too, was after Lincoln had issued his Proclamation. No doubtful man can be Governor of Tennessee in these times, nor who merely acquiesces in what has been done by Ten nessee and the other States of the Confedera cy. The times calls for a man whose heart and soul is in the fight—who believes that we are right and God is with us. Who has the entire confidence of the people of his own State and of the authorities of the Con-

Centreville is to be marked down at the northern end, and Manassas Junction or Camp Pickens at the Southern. The road itself has about the usual

At a point about four miles from Manassas Junction, the railroad crosses Bull Run on a high

The above points being marked down, if meandering line be now drawn from the Stone Bridge on the turnpike, to the railroad bridge above described, it will show the position of Bull Run. It crosses obliquely the line of the road leading from Manussas Junction to Centreville, and at about four miles from each.
The whole course of Bull Run between the two bridges, is included in the present line of Bull Run is a pellucid mountain rivulet of small size in summer, but liable to heavy and wide-spreading freshets. Its course in the region we are noticing, is very much marked by bluffs, particularly on the northeastern side. The fringing of bottom lands, which is chiefly on the southwest side, is covered with magnificent oaks and other forest trees. The bluffs render the crossing of Bull Run difficut except at occasional points. The most favors-Centreville to Manassas Junction crosses. It was at this point that Col. Kershaw's regiment of South Carolinians made their encampment, and threw-up entrenchmen s some weeks ago ; and it was here that they were posted on Friday,in expectation that the ene my would make it their chief point of attack. The tail oaks had been felled on the bottom ground, on the southwest side of the Run, leaving the road but as an avenue through the fallen timber. The road proved, indeed, to be the centre line of the enemy's movement, but the fight-ing was confined to the flanks. They did not make their effort at the central ford, but sought points of crossing, so far asjour infor-mation yet goes, chiefly below the road, or on the side towards the railroad. The forces on our side which were here opposed to them were chiefly two regiment of Virginia troops; viz., the 1st, (of Richmond,) and the 17th, comprising the infan ry of Alexandria, (1x companies,) Fairtax, Prince William, the Leesburg Guards, and the Warrenton Rifles. The conduct of our men was truly beroic. With the rest of the army as admiring spec-tators, they performed the work which had fallen to them with a delightful intrepidity, which has won the affectionate applause of all their generous comrades in arms! Glorious fellows! your praises are on every tongue! Old Virginia is proud of you, and she points to your cool herolsm with the joyous assurance that her children are worthy of their immortal ancestry. Some of your number fell. They will be remembered as noble martyrs. Others are suffering from painful wounds; they have the sympathies of the The artillery practice on our side, fell to the Washington Artillery, of New Orleans. It is sufficient to say that they eclipsed, if possible, their high reputation. We expecmore !- Henceforth for intrepidity, and accuracy, and rapidity of fire, they will stand proverb throughout our land ! Without entering in this, upon special oprations, we will give some of the observations of a gentleman who had the opportunity of viewing the battle, with a spy glass, from neighboring and commanding bill. The enemy made three onsets. Their charging column consisted, apparently, of ten to twelve thousand mer. They led off by an hour's cannonade, apparently designed to draw the fire of our own artillery, and thus reveal its position. The fire was harmless, and our artillery maintained both its silence and concealment. When their infantry came in range, however, they were made to feel the terrors of "masked batteries." When repulsed, the enemy would fly in confusion be youd the crest of the hill, down whose slope they made their charges. They there rallied and prepared for a fresh onset. Their third charge was made, apparently, with great fury, and as if determined to sweep away the ebels as with a flood. It was then that our artillery, having gained an advantageous position, poured upon them its most fatal fire, committing a havock that was almost sickening to look upon. The enemy was mowed down, and fled before the terrible discomfit ure under the greatest consternation. After a pause they opened, apparently, from all their guns, a furious fire directed at the forest and hills and vales in their front. They seemed to think that surely the rebels were some where, and by shooting every where, they must hit some of them. It was probably however, but the explosion of their rage and mortification. It was barmless to our side, and our soldiers allowed them to waste their ammunition unresponded to. For us this was a most brilliant battle and a most cheering success. For the enemy, it was a severe and galling defeat. We may speak more in detail hereafter; meanwhile, thank God for His favor on our arms; and all honor, and the thanks of our great country,
